Women's Health Clinic

The Women's Health Clinic provides a number of screening programmes for women of different age groups as well as those with different needs. This is to ensure that all women who come to our Clinic can receive the most appropriate screening for early diagnosis and treatment of diseases. Major screening items include:

- Breast Examination and Pap Smear:

Breast cancer and cervical cancer are two common cancers among women. Fortunately, both breast cancer and precancerous lesions in the cervix can be diagnosed early with proper screening, thus good survival can be achieved after treatment.

- Bone Densitometry:

Osteoporosis is common in post-menopausal women. If neglected, it may progress to a point where fractures frequently occur with minor trauma. Early detection of bone loss can prompt treatment, restore lost bone mass and reduce the chance of fracture. Dual Energy X-ray Absorptiometry (DEXA) is the preferred technology for measuring bone mineral density. It measures the bone mineral density of the spine, hip or total body to provide a reliable measurement of bone health, while exposing a woman to only 10% of the radiation in a chest X-ray.
